Grounds Upon Which Jurisdiction of this Court is Invoked

This proceeding is an appeal of a criminal conviction which is brought to 28 U.S.C.A. section 1257.

The chronology of judgments below from which this appeal is taken is as follows:

a) The entry of the Ohio Supreme Court overruling Defendant-Appellant's motion for rehearing of denial for leave to appeal from the Franklin County Ohio Court of Appeals, dated 3/4/77-appearing at page A3 and A4 in the Appendix of this statement.

b) The entry and decision of the Ohio Supreme Court denying leave to appeal from the Franklin County Ohio Court of Appeals, dated 2/11/77-appearing at pages A5, A6, A7 and A8 in the appendix of this statement.

c) The entry and reported opinion of the Court of Appeals of Franklin County, Ohio dated October 14, 1976 sustaining the judgment and conviction of Defendant-Appellant in the Court of Common Pleas, Franklin County, Ohio-appearing at pages A9-A18 in the appendix of this statement.

d) the entry of the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio dated March 10, 1976, find finding Defendant-Appellant guilty and setting forth the sentence of the Court- appearing at pages A19, A20 and A21 in the appendix of this statement.

Notice of appeal was filed in the Ohio Supreme Court on April 22, 1977 from the nost recently dated judgment of the Court in this case, dated March 4, 1977 and listed in a) above - that notice appearing at page A1 and A2 in the appendix of this statement.

The statutory provision which is believed to confer jurisdiction of this appeal upon this Court is 28 U. S. C. A. section 1257 (2), set out as follows:

Final judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court as follows:

2) By appeal, where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of any state on the ground of its being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of its validity.

Cases which are believed to be in support of the jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court are as follows:

Kelly v. Gilbert, U. S. District Ct. D. Mont., Billings Division, CV-76-108- BLG (1976); A. T. L. A. Law Reporter Volume 20 Number 2, p. 69.

Parker v. Gladden, 87 S. Ct. 468, 285 U.S. 363, 17 L. Ed. 2d. 420 (1966)

U.S. ex , rel Pascal v. Burke, 90 F. Supp 868 (1950).

Stroble v. State of Calif., 725. Ct. 599, 343 U.S. 181, 96 L. Ed. 872 (1952).

U.S. v. Pink, 62 S. Ct. 552, 315 U.S. 203 86L. Ed. 796 (1942).

Norris v. Alabama, 55 S. Ct. 579, 294 U.S. 587, 79 L. Ed. 1074 (1935)

Ohio Revised Code section 2907. 02 (D) is contained in the appendix not so much because of a challenge to the validity of that statute or section, but rather to illustrate for the Court that particular section of the law the application of which is challenged by Defendant-Appellant as having been capriciously and arbitrarily applied to him in violation of his constitutionally guaranteed rights of a fair trial, due process of the law and, most especially, equal protection under the law, being repugnant, thereby, to the Constitution of the United States.

FEDERAL QUESTIONS PRESENTED BY THIS APPEAL

1) Whether or not the prosecution, violated Defendant-Appellant's right to a fair trial, due process of the law, and equal protection of the law by its obtaining a series of continuances to appear before the grand jury in order to delay a hearing on the merits that act in order to utilize evidence of that alleged act prior to its dismissal against defendant in trial of a wholly independant act, here in question.

2) Whether or not the trial court violated defendant's constitutional rights to a fair trial, due process of the law, and equal protection under the law by its failure to sustain the defense objection to the introduction of evidence of an unindicted alleged prior act of defendant wholly independent of the one for which he was on trial.

3) Whether or not the trial court violated defendant's constitutional rights to a fair trial, due process under the law and equal protection of the law by its manner of application of the law which it had ruled applicable to the case by foreclosing defense use of evidence of the victim's past sexual activity, while still allowing use of evidence of defendant's alleged past sexual activity even without the ruling required by that very same law.

4) Whether or not the Ohio Supreme Court in its refusal to entertain Defendant-Appellant's motion for leave to appeal rehearing of denial of the motion, and the Franklin County Ohio Court of Appeals in its affirmance of the judgment of conviction of Defendant-Appellant's below violated Defendant-Appellant's constitutional rights to a fair trial, due process of the law and equal protection under the law.

5) Whether or not the trial court, and the various higher courts in upholding the verdict and judgment of the trial court, violated Defendant-Appellant's constitutional rights to a fair trial, due process of the law and equal protection of the law by allowing the verdict and judgment which is contrary to Ohio law and against the manifest weight of the evidence to stand over defense motions and objections.

6) Whether or not the trial court and the higher courts violated Defendant-Appellant's guaranteed rights to remain silent by the 5th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and the right to effective (prepared) counsel as guaranteed by the 6th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution by allowing testimony and evidence in the prosecution's case-in-chief of another act wholly independent of the one for which Defendant was on trial.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Defendant-Appellant Robert Tracy was tried in December, 1975 before the jury on charges of aggravated burglary and rape as set forth in the indictment on page A26, A27 and A28 of the Apendix. He was found guilty, given a psychiatric examination per statute and sentenced to two four to twenty-five year concurrent terms. Defendant-Appellant duly filed notice of appeal.

During the prosecution's case-in-chief, evidence was presented over objection concerning Defendant-Appellant's alleged prior act of sexual activity with his daughter. This admission of evidence was assigned as error to the Court of Appeals. The Court of Appeals held it to be immaterial to the case (page A13, A14) but affirmed the conviction anyway. This evidence was permitted in direct contravention to the mandate of Ohio Revised Code 2907.02 (D) which provides that "evidence of specific instances of the Defendant's sexual activity, opinion evidence of the Defendant's sexual activity and reputation evidence of the Defendant's sexual activity shall not be admitted under this Section unless it involves evidence of the origin of seman, pregnancy, or disease, the Defendant's past sexual activity with the victim or is admissible against the Defendant under Section 2907.02 (D) of the Revised Code, and only to the extent that the Court finds that the evidence is material to a fact at issue in the case and that its inflammatory or prejudicial nature does not outweigh its probative value." No such ruling was ever made by the Trial Court.

Additionally, Ohio case law holds that "as a general rule, the introduction of evidence tending to show that a Defendant has committed another crime wholly independent of the offense for which he is on trial is prohibited." State v. Hector, 190. St. 2d 167 (1969); State vs. Watson, 28 O. St. 2d 15 (1971); State v. Curry, 43 O. St. 2d 66 (1975); State v. Burson, 38 O. St. 2d 157 (1974); State v. Snowden, 49 O. App. 2d 7 (1976).

Relevancy and materiality are the two-pronged basis of admission of evidence of other acts in Ohio. Yet here where the evidence is held to be immaterial (page A13 and A14) by the Court of Appeals, it is still held admissible.

The Trial Court held specifically that the victim's prior sexual activity would not be admissible but made no ruling whatsoever as to Defendant's past sexual activity except to allow such evidence, over defense objections, even though the alleged prior act was unindicted at the time of admission into evidence.

Subsequently Defendant was found not guilty of that "sexual act" in a trial on the merits once indicted.

The alleged sexual activity occurred approximately one month prior to the act here in question. Defendant-Appellant was not, coincidentally, indicted on the first alleged act until the day following the guilty verdict with which we are here dealing! The prosecution, by obtaining five continuances to appear before the Grand Jury in order to prepare the case, manipulated that very Grand Jury system in violation of Defendant-Appellant's constitutional rights of due process and equal protection of the law. That is the same type of "oppressive exercise of authority denying Plaintiff (here, Defendant) his constitutional rights to due process of law," which gave rise to federal intervention in Kelly v. Gilbert (page4). It is on this basis that the Court should assume jurisdiction in our case also.

Defendant-Appellant attempted to raise this manipulation of the Grand Jury in argument before the Court of Appeals and in the memorandum submitted to the Ohio Supreme Court. Counsel was prepared to defend the rape charge and not an immaterial act which was not before the Court and did object to admission of evidence of that act. The prosecutorial manipulation only came to attention once the appeal was perfected and the manipulation was then attempted to be argued through the original objection. By this manipulation of the Grand Jury system the prosecution effectively denied Defendant effective counsel as guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, and due process of law.

The Trial Court held that the Ohio Revised Code Section 2907. 02 effective on August 27, 1975 would be the applicable law for the offense which allegedly occurred on August 15, 1975., over defense objection. That fact and the uneven application of that law to victim and Defendant were assigned as error through the Courts. Denial of acts of victim's past sexual activity while allowing evidence of the Defendant's past sexual activity violates Defendant's guaranteed constitutional rights to fair trial, due process of the law and equal protection of the law. The affirmance of a judgment which is contrary to law and against the manifest weight of the evidence violates these same fundamental rights; Defendant has assigned this as error throughout. Additionally, the prosecution introduced this evidence in its case-in-chief before Defendant had placed his character in question and while he was presumed to still be of good character. State v. Thorpe, 49 O. App. 2d 291. By so doing they effectively violated Defendant's Fifth Amendment right to remain silent by forcing him to take the stand to explain away this irrelevant act.

This continued series of violations of Defendant-

Appellant's constitutional rights to effective counsel, the right to remain silent, and the right to a fair trial, due process of the law and equal protection of the law are each, in and of themselves, substantial. However, when taken together, the panoply of encroachment warrants plenany consideration by this Court. Here, a man was falsely accused of having committed a crime by a woman, tried in a case where the prosecution's own physical evidence was in direct conflict with the alleged victim's statements, aided by the Trial Court's erroneous admission of an alleged unindicted prior act and made possible by prosecution's manipulation of the Grand Jury system in direct contravention of due process of the law.

Beyond the Court's erroneous admission of the alleged prior act evidence, the Court decided which law would be applicable to the case and then arbitrarily applied that law in violation of Defendant-Appellant's constitutional rights. The Court of Appeals in their affirmation of the judgment and the Ohio Supreme Court in overruling defense motions to appeal and for rehearing merely compounded the detriment to Defendant's rights. Extraneous to the trial, the prosecution subverted a supposed safeguard provided to insure Defendant's right to due process of the law by manipulation the Grand Jury system.

For all of the above reasons, I respectfully request the United States Supreme Court to assume jurisdiction in this case and grant a plenary review by means of briefs on the merits and oral argument to resolve the constitutional questions involved.

WHITESIDE, J.

Defendant appeals from his conviction in the Franklin County Court of Common Pleas of rape and aggravated burglary and raises seven assignments of error in support of his appeal, as follows:

"1. The trial court erred in its ruling that the case at hand should proceed under the auspices of Amended Substitute Senate Bill #144, the effective date of which was August 27, 1975, rather than proceeding under the law as it was in effect on August 17, 1975, the date of the alleged offense.

"2. The trial court erred when it allowed, over defense counsel's objections, the prosecution to present evidence and/or testimony of an unindicted prior alleged offense supposedly committed by Defendant, Robert Tracy, which evidence and/or testimony was, in reality inadmissible.

"3. The verdict and judgment are against the manifest weight of the evidence.

"4. The verdict and judgment are contrary to law.

"5. The trial court erred in overruling defense counsel's motion for a new trial.

"6. The trial court erred in overruling defense counsel's motion for acquittal on the basis that the prosecution failed to carry its burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

"7. The trial court erred in overruling defense counsel's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict returned by the jury."

The victim of the alleged rape was residing with defendant's wife from whom he was separated. The victim had also resided with defendant and his wife prior to their separation, which had occurred shortly prior to the occurrence herein involved.

The victim testified that defendant broke into her bedroom and raped her, using a knife as a weapon. According to the victim's testimony, the motive for the rape was not the usual obvious motive but, rather was essentially one of revenge.

The victim testified that several weeks prior to the rape while she was living with defendant and his wife, at or shortly before the time of their separation, she called the police to report that defendant was attempting to have his ten-year-old daughter engage in a sex act with him. As a result, defendant was arrested and indicted upon the charge.

Defendant testified on his own defense and denied any criminal involvment wither with the victim in this case or with his daughter. Defendant also presented an alibi defense.

By the first assignment of error, defendant contends that the trial court erred in applying R. C. 2907. 02 to this case since it took effect on August 27, 1975, ten days after the alleged offense herein involved.

R. C. 2907. 02(D) provides in pertinent part as follows:

"Evidence of specific instances of the victim's sexual activity, opinion evidence of the victim's sexual activity, and reputation evidence of the victim's sexual activity shall not be admitted under this section unless it involves evidence of the origin of semen, pregnancy, or disease, or the victim's past sexual activity with the offender, and only to the extent that the court finds that the evidence is material to a fact at issue in the case and that its inflammatory or prejudicial nature does not outweigh its probative value."

There can be no error in the application of R. C. 2907. 02(D) to this case since it does not change the law. The section permits evidence of the victim's prior sexual activity "only to the extent that * * * the evidence is material to a fact at issue in the case." Quite clearly, evidence which is not material to a fact at issue in the case is not admissible regardless of the nature of the evidence. One of the classic bases for nonadmissibility of evidence is that it is immaterial.

The real import of R. C. 2907. 02 is to require by R. C. 2907. 02(E) a prior hearing in chambers upon the question of admissibility, that is whether evidence of prior sexual activity of the victim (or of the defendant) is material to an issue in the case. In other word, the issue of materiality is to be determined out of the presence of the jury and ordinarily at least three days prior to trial. R. C. 2907. 02(E) expressly provides that the victim is entitled to representation by counsel during any hearing to resolve the admissibility of evidence. Defendant does not complain of application of R. C. 2907. 02(E) or (F) but, rather, of R. C. 2907. 02(D). Since R. C. 2907. 02 (D) merely restates the law as to admissibility of evidence and does not preclude the admission of any evidence that was previously admissible, there could be no error in the application of the section to this case.

In any event, it is quite clear that the evidence defendant wished to present was not material to any factual issue in this case. Defendant wished to present evidence that the victim had previously been raped by an unknown assailant and reported this fact to the police. Obviously, such evidence would not be material to the issues in this case, having no bearing either upon the guilt of defendant or upon the credibility of the victim. Accordingly, the first assignement of error is not well taken.

By the second assignment of error, the defendant contends that the trial court erred in permitting some evidence with respect to the charge against the defendant with respect to the alleged sex act with his daughter.

Whether defendant was guilty or innocent of that act is immaterial to this case. However, the fact that the victim had reported the matter to the police and caused defendant to be indicted was material, bearing upon defendant's motive. While ordinarily the motive for rape is obvious, in this case, there was evidence of a motive of revenge. O.R.C. 2945.59 provides that, where the defendant's motive is an issue, "any acts of the defendant which tend to show his motive in doing the act in question may be proved." The objected-to evidence was admissible as bearing upon the defendant's motive in committing the act in question. The second assignment of error is not well taken.

The remaining five assignments of error are somewhat interrelated in that in all of them defendant contends there was insufficient evidence to support a finding of his guilt. None of these assignments of error are well taken. The testimony of the victim, if believed, was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction.

Although there was a basis, strongly argued by defendant, to attack the credibility of the victim because of certain inconsistencies in the evidence and because of her friendship with defendant's estranged wife, the manifest weight of the evidence supports the credibility of the victim. In any event, there is no basis for finding the verdict of the jury to be against the weight of the evidence or not to be supported by sufficient evidence. The evidence was ample, the jury believed the testimony of the victim, rather than that of defendant, which it was entitled to do.

For the foregoing reasons, all seven assignments of error are overruled, and the judgment of the Franklin County Court of Common Pleas is affirmed.

Judgment Affirmed.
